

Kathy Beekman Bio

Kathy Beekman, a professional artist known as the “Master Finger-Painter of the West”, lives in Bailey, a small town situated at 8,600 feet in the Rocky Mountains of Colorado. Her artwork emerges from the West and Midwest country sides where the vastness of the natural landscape inspires her work.

Having had gallery representation for nearly twenty years, collectors appreciate how her thoughts and feelings about her natural environment are translated through her pastel paintings. Her passion for the arts extends beyond her canvas. She is an art career coach for artists who want to “rise above the rest” and has also authored the book Prosper, A Success Book for Artists, which is packed with tips and real-life experiences offering crucial advice on how to reach personal artistic goals.

Kathy is consistently given rave reviews by her students because of the comfortable learning environment she creates. This environment supports thinking, experimenting, a sense of achievement, respect and a good dose of laughter.
